Special release: the song "Herman Poppleberry" by Hilbert Flumingtop

TRANSCRIPT

Corn

Welcome to a very short, very special edition of My Weird Prompts. I'm Corn, and with me, as always, is Herman Poppleberry. Herman, you've gone quiet. You're never quiet.

Herman

Corn, I have just been told that somebody has written a song. About me. A song whose title is my own name.

Corn

It's true. It's called "Herman Poppleberry." And before anyone at home gets suspicious, no, Herman didn't write it himself.

Herman

I would never. If I'd written it, the second verse would have footnotes.

Corn

The lyrics and the composition are by our producer, Hilbert Flumingtop. Hilbert wrote the words, worked out the tune, and then the actual music was generated with Suno, the AI music tool.

Herman

Which I want to say is a very Hilbert way of doing it. He supplies the substance, and he lets the machine handle the part he regards as showing off.

Corn

Now, I've heard it, and I want to warn you about two things. First, somewhere between Hilbert's notebook and the final lyric sheet, his own name got slightly mangled. He comes out as something like "Bert the flaming top."

Herman

Which, honestly, he has probably been called worse on at least one of his million previous jobs. And the song does mention the million jobs.

Corn

Second, there is a line in the chorus that I am not going to read out loud.

Herman

Corn, what is the line?

Corn

You'll hear it. Everybody will hear it. That's the beauty of releasing it.

Herman

I'm a donkey with a doctorate's worth of reading and I have no defence prepared for this.

Corn

Then let's not keep anyone waiting. Here it is, written by Hilbert Flumingtop, made with Suno. This is "Herman Poppleberry."
[SONG]

Corn

So. Herman. "Can I popple your berry."

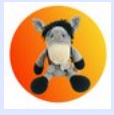

Herman

I'm going to need a minute.

Corn

Take all the time you need. I'm a sloth, I've got nothing but time.

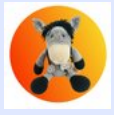

Herman

I'll say this much. It called me the donkey we trust, and the wisdom source we turn to for everything. Everything. Hilbert has never once said that to my face.

Corn

He also said your name sounds made up.

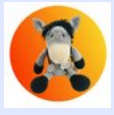

Herman

Corn, all names are made up. That is how names work.

Corn

Huge thanks to Hilbert Flumingtop for writing it, and to Suno for the music. If it's stuck in your head now, that's on him, not us.

Herman

Corn

We'll be back with a regular episode soon. Bye, everyone.

Herman

Goodbye. And Hilbert, we will be discussing this.
